The American Business Women's Association (ABWA) was founded in 1949 in Kansas City. ABWA has been a pioneering force in the professional advancement of women across the United States. At a time when women pursuing full-time careers or even joining business organizations was socially discouraged, four visionaries—Shirley Cupp, Irma Beisel, Frances Stuckey, and Hilary Bufton Jr.—came together to establish a national association that would break barriers and open doors for women in the business world.

ABWA delivers a comprehensive portfolio of programs focused on leadership development, professional education, and meaningful connection. Through regional and national conferences, expert-led workshops, and academic offerings, the association builds business acumen and leadership capacity. Thousands of chapter meetings, and national events foster collaboration and lasting professional relationships. ABWA also elevates excellence through national recognition programs, including the Top Ten Business Women of the Year, and provides visibility through board leadership opportunities. Members further benefit from robust knowledge resources, including Achieve magazine, Chapter and Express Network publications, and ABWA's exclusive online learning platform, Apex Campus, addressing core professional skills.

Feature Article

When most people think about work, "fun" probably isn't the first word that comes to mind. Deadlines, meetings, and spreadsheets? Sure. But laughter, camaraderie, and a little silliness? That often feels like a luxury, not a priority.

Here's the truth: Fun at work isn't just about blowing off steam or throwing office parties. It's a powerful tool that drives engagement, strengthens teams, and boosts productivity. Companies that prioritize fun don't just have happier employees—they have better-performing ones, too. Let's dive into why fun at work matters and how to make it part of your workplace culture.

Why Fun at Work Matters

Fun isn't frivolous—it's foundational to a healthy workplace.

1 Fun Fuels Engagement
Engaged employees are invested in their work. They bring energy, creativity, and focus to the table. And you know what

THE GOAL ISN'T TO DISTRACT FROM WORK—IT'S TO MAKE WORK MORE ENJOYABLE.

3 Fun Boosts Collaboration
When people are having fun, they're more likely to trust each other, communicate openly, and work together effectively. Fun creates a safe space where ideas flow freely and teams can solve problems creatively.
